Legionnaires demanding that the New York men who were confined to Fox Hills be kept within the state. The judicial district leaders were asked to communicate this idea to the numerous posts throughout the state.

Francis P. Welsh, who is the Legion's liaison officer in the Veterans' Bureau, told the committee that in Saranac Lake there were 240 tubercular former service men who were receiving no compensation from the government and who were taking treatment at their own expense. He pointed out that the Chambers of Commerce at Liberty and Saranac Lake had made a proposition to the government providing room for almost 500 patients and added that the chambers denied the statement attributed to them that they did not want the tubercular service men in their towns.

He explained that while the Legion has been for two years demanding the closing of Fox Hills it did so with the understanding that some provision would be made to hospitalize these men within the state before the actual closing of the institution took place.

Celebrations Indorsed

A resolution offered by the Kings County Legion calling for Memorial Day as the official day for remembering the dead and Armistice Day as a duty of rejoicing was adopted and forwarded to the national organization.

The committee drafted a telegram to Governor Miller asking that he approve the Whitehouse bill, which will open the soldiers' home at Bath, New York, to the veterans.

The committee approved the action taken by the veterans' mountain committee in securing the property at Big Tupper Lake. A number of prominent women in New York will begin a drive on April 6 to raise an endowment fund to support the institution.

Colonel Ralph Robertson, member of the national executive committee from New York, was the toastmaster at the dinner, and the other speaker was Bernard J. Ryan, district chairman.

The transfer of tubercular soldiers from the Fox Hills hospital, Staten Island, to the military hospital at Denver has resulted in the American Legion calling a mass meeting at Town Hall next Tuesday evening. The meeting will protest, it is announced, against the sending of these New York men to a hospital 2,000 miles from home. It will demand that suitable quarters be found for them within reasonable distance of their friends and families.

Notice of the meeting was given yesterday by the American Legion and Citizens' Welfare Committee, Room 2240 Municipal Building, together with the information that already thirty patients had been transferred to the Denver hospital. By the end of the week, it is said, all of the Fox Hills patients will have been sent to hospitals far away from New York unless the order is rescinded.

"The care of wounded veterans of the war is not an American Legion duty but a public duty," J. Noble Braden, chairman of the committee in charge of the meeting, said yesterday. "They are our boys, and it is our duty to see that everything possible is done for them. At a time like this, when the men need the encouragement and the assurance of the love of their families and when unemployment has considerably drained financial resources everywhere, it is unfair to send these helpless men to places where the price of transportation is a luxury beyond the grasp of their families.

"The American public has become apathetic to the condition of the wounded soldiers. The boys are out of sight and apparently forgotten. The American Legion has done its best to care for them, to perform the functions which should be undertaken by the people themselves. We propose at Tuesday's meeting to place the true story of the condition of the wounded and disabled veterans squarely before the public."

Colonel C. J. Wickersham, chairman of the state American Legion committee on hospitalization, will preside at the meeting, and among the speakers will be Martin W. Littleton, State Commander William F. Deegan, Miss Alice Lindley, of the Fox Hills committee, and James M. Blackwell, who has spent two years investigating conditions among the wounded.

Several sites have been offered for special hospitals for these men, including the choice of four locations at Saranac Lake, as a gift from the village of Saranac. A committee will be chosen at Tuesday's meeting to present the protest to the Washington officials.

Fashion and the Cantilever Agree

Fashion is the ficklest of masters. A while ago even the most considered others frumps who didn't lace until they achieved waists like an hour-glass. And more recently, out went the spindle heel and the pointed toe that so tortured women's feet.
